THEY COULD BE SAVIORS

FIVE-TIME AWARD-WINNING ECO-THRILLER

WHAT IF SAVING THE PLANET MEANS KIDNAPPING THE BILLIONAIRES DESTROYING IT?

FIVE BILLIONAIRES. NO RANSOM.

A hidden compound. A sisterhood of psychedelic therapists. The men who helped break the planet are being forced to fix it.

Josh Latham, CEO of the world's largest corporation, is abducted alongside four other billionaires. Their captor, Mel, believes they have the power to solve climate change—if psychedelic therapy can make them care about something beyond money and themselves.

But Mel is drinking again, time is running out, and her conviction that people can change is being tested. If the mission fails, nobody goes home—not the billionaires, and not the women who took them.

INTERVIEW DIANA ABOUT

Billionaire-ism is a mental illness. Can psychedelic therapy change the psychology of extreme wealth and power?

Billionaire accountability. Should the ultrawealthy be held responsible for addressing the climate crisis?

A Canadian running for U.S. president. Why is a Canadian novelist who was born and raised in Canada constitutionally eligible to run for president of the USA?

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Diana Colleen is a Canadian novelist and psychedelic facilitator based in Kelowna, BC. Her experience with psychedelic-assisted therapy inspired They Could Be Saviors, a five-time award-winning eco-thriller about climate change, wealth and transformation. She believes hope is the consequence of action.

She is also running for U.S. president in 2028. Born and raised in Canada, she is constitutionally eligible to seek the office.
